

Private Security Authority:

- There is no obligation on the owner of a registered business name to notify CRO of a change of address. From an enforcement perspective, this can place individuals beyond our investigative reach (assuming there is no other means of tracing them).
- There are individuals who operate a business under a brand or moniker, who are not entered in CRO records (and possibly/likely are not obliged to be). Again, this can place these individuals beyond our reach.
- There would appear to be no publicly available record of individuals who operate a business without any form of business name.